

Lt. Governor Skillman Opens Hamilton Boulevard with Local Officials

It is always great to be home in Lawrence County, it is even better to travel back home when I have good news to share. And last week in Mitchell, I announced the official opening of Hamilton Boulevard.

There are many reasons to celebrate the opening of Hamilton Boulevard, but the most glaring reason to celebrate is the opportunity this road will bring to Mitchell, Lawrence County and our entire region of the state. Hamilton Boulevard is an important component to the area's economic health as it will connect Highway 37 to Meridian, providing easy access to the promising Mitchell industrial park and the Lehigh Cement Plant.

Lt. Gov. Skillman and State Sen. Brent Steele talk with fellow Hoosier Jack Kenworthy at a news conference. The Lt. Gov. announced the opening of Hamilton Boulevard.

Any good business person will tell you that one of the most important factors in attracting and retaining companies to an area is infrastructure – access to major roads, airports and transportation. Time after time, when Indiana attracts new investment, our state is cited for its modern infrastructure as one of the deciding factors in their choice to locate here.

That's why we've put the state's infrastructure at the top of our priority list. Major Moves – Indiana's ten-year, fully funded infrastructure plan – continues to fund hundreds of projects statewide that would otherwise been on hold, or worse, never even attempted. While other states struggle to maintain a crumbling infrastructure, Indiana is light years ahead, paving new roads and constructing safer routes that will open doors for a new wave of prosperity.

Thanks to the years of hard work by local and state officials, Mitchell is modernizing their infrastructure and securing new opportunities for Hoosiers through this project. I expect future economic success will now travel easier to Mitchell thanks to the reality of the Hamilton Boulevard project.
